GOOD CAUSE REASONS FOR NOT RETURNING YOUR TRANSITIONAL BENEFITS REPORT TIMELY

You may continue to receive Medicaid if you have a good cause reason for not returning your Transitional Benefit Report timely. You have a good cause if one of the following happened:

1. Someone died in your household; or

2. You, your spouse or a child for whom you provide care was in the hospital; or

3. Circumstances beyond your control, limited to:
   a. a natural disaster
   b. a fire
   c. a computer breakdown at the state
   d. a postal strike or postal delay, provided the return envelope is postmarked the day prior to the deadline; or

4. Any other reason if you tell the county and the county hearing officer determines it is a good cause.

Call your worker immediately if you think you have good cause.
